DAYTON, Ohio, March 28, 1972 --- Dr. Charles Hartshorne, a leading exponent of process philosophy who is teaching at the University of Texas in Austin, will serve as professor-in-residence for three days at the University of Dayton, April 4 through 6. The noted philosopher will give a lecture, participate in a seminar, lead a discussion period and then appear in philosophy and theology classes to discuss the broad aspects of his teaching field.

Dr. Hartshorne's visit is co-sponsored by the departments of Philosophy and Theological Studies.

His first lecture will be on "Pan-en-theism and Panpsychism" and be conducted in the Wohlleben Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, April 4. He will make two appearances on Wednesday, April 5, leading a discussion of his previous night's talk in the Kennedy Union, room 331, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. That evening he will conduct a seminar based on his paper, "Analysis and Cultural Lag in Philosophy," from 3 to 5 p.m., also in Kennedy 331.

His final day will be spent in leading discussion groups in philosophy and theology classes.

Dr. Hartshorne is a graduate of Harvard University. He has taught at the University of Chicago, including some lectures in the Divinity School there, and at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia.

Dr. Hartshorne's lean toward natural theology, or philosophy of religion, is attributed to his close association with the late Alfred North Whitehead. The latter died in 1947.
