UD TO CO-SPONSOR NEWSPAPER WORKSHOP

DAYTON, Ohio, June 15, 1983 -- The University of Dayton in conjunction with The Journal Herald will be sponsoring the 11th annual "Use of the Media: The Newspaper in the Classroom" workshop, June 20 through July 1. Sessions will be held Monday through Friday, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Participants will learn how to use the newspaper as a tool for teaching. Media literacy skills, the ability to critically analyze a piece of reading material, will be stressed. Participants will also be encouraged to be creative in their approach to using the newspaper as part of their curriculum.

The workshop will be lead by Gordon Fuchs, a UD professor in teacher education. There will be three guest speakers from The Journal Herald. Brad Tillson, managing editor in charge of features, Gene Phillips, advertising, and George Morris, mechanics, will discuss their duties as members of a newspaper staff. A tour of The Journal Herald's facilities is being scheduled for Tuesday, June 28. Also, a participant of the 1978 workshop, Sr. Bernice Ann Stronczek, will demonstrate the various ways she has used the newspaper with her students.

The course will provide undergraduate students with two semester hours of credit and graduate students with three quarter hours. All credit will be awarded in the area of teacher education.

Between ten and thirty-five participants are expected to attend.
