UNIVERSITY TO PROMOTE SMALL BUSINESS INNOVATION RESEARCH

DAYTON, Ohio, February 9, 1984 -- The University of Dayton is sponsoring a "Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Seminar" on March 1, 1984, at the John F. Kennedy Memorial Union on the UD campus. The program, from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. is planned for engineers, biomedical researchers, chemists, computer specialists, business consultants, and others who wish to form a small business and compete for funds from the federal research budget.

Richard Clinkscales, director of Small Business Utilization for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will conduct a workshop on his agency's SBIR program. The seminar will also include workshops with other federal agency representatives, lectures on effective proposal writing, literature search methodology, patents and licensing, venture capital, and money management. In addition, there will be an opportunity for participants to learn of Ohio's university resources, and the Thomas Alva Edison Award program will be explained.

The SBIR program is made possible by monies from the Small Business Innovation Development Act, which requires all federal agencies with research and development budgets in excess of $100 million to set aside a percentage of that budget for small business firms. Awards of up to $50,000 for the first phase of the program and up to $500,000 for the second phase are available to those small businesses that wish to compete.

For more information on the seminar or the Small Business Innovation Research program, contact Stevie Ann Hardyal at the UD Research Institute, 513-229-3711.
