NEW BUSINESS SCHOOL
DEAN NAMED

DAYTON, Ohio, March 21, 1985 -- Effective July 1, Sam Gould, Ph.D. has been named to be the dean of the School of Business Administration of the University of Dayton. He replaces William J. Hoben who is stepping down from the deanship following 28 years of service to UD, including 22 years as dean of the School of Business Administration.

Gould, 42, is currently director of the Center for Studies in Business, Economics, and Human Resources at the University of Texas at San Antonio. Gould was chosen from 25 candidates who were evaluated by a UD ten-member search committee. The committee worked four months before narrowing 25 candidates down to five interviewees, and the entire selection process took six months. John Rapp, Ph.D., of the Department of Economics and Finance chaired the search committee.

Gould has served in his present position at the University of Texas since 1979. His duties have included obtaining funding for center operations, directing research projects, supervising staff, and developing and maintaining relationships with external constituencies. Prior to joining the University, Gould was director of data processing operations for A.C. Delco Division of General Motors Corporation, Flint, Michigan.

He has earned a Ph.D. in organizational behavior/theory from Michigan State University (1975), a M.B.A. in management science from the University of Colorado (1970), and a B.S. in mathematics from Ohio University (1964).

He has taught undergraduate and graduate level courses for the University of Texas and has published over 30 papers for professional journals, proceedings, and conventions.

Gould is married and has three children.

Introducing the new dean, University President Brother Raymond L. Fitz, S.M. said, "I personally look forward to working with Dr. Gould, and I am confident that his professional expertise will be a major factor in continuing our very successful tradition at the School of Business Administration."
