UD MAKES THE GRADE

DAYTON, Ohio, August 22, 1985 -- The University of Dayton will be included for the first time in two prestigious reference publications: Times Books' The Best Buys in College Education and Peterson's Guides fourth edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges.

UD is one of 221 colleges featured and profiled in the Times' publication, edited by Edward B. Fiske, education editor of The New York Times. The University of Dayton is listed as one of those colleges "that offer high quality education at a reasonable cost." The guidebook is a reference tool for parents and students coping with the spiraling cost of high education. Publication is set for October 1985.

Peterson's guide lists UD among 316 other schools that consistently have more undergraduate applicants with above-average capabilities than they can accept. Together with 32 art and music schools that have highly selective acceptance rates, this group of colleges represents approximately 10 per cent of all American institutions of higher education.
