DAYTON, Ohio, July 11, 1986 -- Applications are still being accepted for "Mind and Flight," a program sponsored by the University of Dayton and Elderhostel, Inc., from July 20 through July 26 at the University. Elderhostel, a national educational program for adults over the age of 60, provides the opportunity to attend mini-courses at institutions all over the world.

Participants at UD will explore historical sites in Dayton, including the Wright Brothers' bicycle shop and the United States Air Force Museum. The program will examine the progression of flight from early history up to today's aviation and space exploration. The poetry of Paul Laurence Dunbar, classmate of Orville Wright, will also be discussed.

The program fee is usually $175, but those who are awarded the Elderhostelships will only need to pay the $30 registration fee. Room, board, instruction, and supplies will be provided.

The Elderhostel program, based on European youth hostels, celebrates its tenth anniversary in Ohio this year. In addition to UD, there are eighteen colleges and universities offering the program throughout the state.
