UD TEACHER NAMED OHIO'S PROFESSOR OF THE YEAR

DAYTON, Ohio, July 29, 1986 — Dr. Florence Wolff, a University of Dayton professor, has been named Ohio's Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

A professor in UD's Department of Communication, Wolff was one of 11 teachers to win top honors in CASE's state Professor of the Year competition. She was selected from 324 nominees who were entered in both state and national categories; 36 states and Canada were represented.

An author and a national authority on listening, Wolff has taught at UD for 17 years. In 1984 she received the Outstanding Teaching Award from the University's College of Arts and Sciences, and this year she received UD's Alumni Award in Teaching. Through a University evaluation process, students over the years have consistently ranked her as one of their favorite teachers in the Communication Department.

More than 2,800 educational institutions are members of CASE, the international professional association for campus fund raisers, alumni administrators, government relations professionals, and communicators.
