The University of Dayton

News Release

MEDIA ADVISORY

How should the legal system handle AIDS patients who knowingly expose others to the disease? That's just one of the issues surrounding AIDS that will be discussed by attorneys, judges and educators in a March 1 symposium at the University of Dayton. Called "Legal, Medical and Social Consequences of AIDS Transmission," the symposium is being sponsored by the UD School of Law's chapter of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

WHEN: Tuesday, March 1, 1988, 6 to 9 p.m.

WHERE: University of Dayton School of Law, Room 201

PARTICIPANTS: Judge Barbara Gorman, Montgomery County Common Pleas Court; Dennis Lieberman, attorney; Howard F. Wunderlich, M.D., assistant professor of medicine at Wright State University; Jeffrey D. Hamilton, chaplain, Miami Valley Hospital; and Lawrence P. Ulrich, professor of philosophy at the University of Dayton.
