PROFESSIONAL RESEARCH AWARD TO BE PRESENTED AT UD NOV. 14

University of Dayton President Brother Raymond L. Fitz, S.M., will present the 1988 Wohlleben/Hochwalt Outstanding Professional Research Award on Nov. 14 to two environmental scientists who devised a way to destroy hazardous waste through solar-powered incineration. The award will be presented to Barry Dellinger of Washington Township and John Graham of Kettering during a noon luncheon in the Kennedy Union West Ballroom. The presentation is expected to be made at approximately 1:30 p.m..

The Wohlleben/Hochwalt Award was established to honor outstanding professional research at UD. It was endowed by Carroll Hochwalt, a 1920 UD graduate who credited Brother William Wohlleben, S.M., with his success as a research chemist. Hochwalt and his partner founded their own company, which in 1936 was merged into the Monsanto Chemical Company and became the Central Research Laboratory of Monsanto Chemical Company.

UD CIA LECTURE SERIES SPEAKER TO CONDUCT TELECONFERENCE NOV. 15

A teleconference with the Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, senior research scholar at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University, will be the final presentation in the University of Dayton's CIA lecture series. Hehir also serves as counselor for social policy for the United States Catholic Conference.

Hehir will conduct the teleconference on Tuesday, Nov. 15 from 6 to 7 p.m., with the local audience in O'Leary Auditorium in Miriam Hall. The question-and-answer session is free and open to the public. Questions for Hehir are expected to focus on the question, "What resources are there in the history of Catholic moral theology that help a Catholic institution discern when an organization may be judged sufficiently immoral as to forfeit cooperation with it?" The University of Dayton CIA lecture series was designed to spark campus-wide dialogue on the issue of CIA recruitment.

DISABILITY AWARENESS DAY SLATED FOR NOV. 16 AT UD

University of Dayton students will be able to experience first-hand the limitations encountered every day by people with disabilities, such as handling a wheelchair and functioning without sight, during Disability Awareness Day. The University of Dayton's University Activities, in conjunction with Handicapped Services, will recognize Disability Awareness Day with activities for students, faculty and staff on Wednesday, Nov. 16 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Plaza in front of Kennedy Union. Faculty and staff members have been invited to participate by helping the "disabled" students move about campus. For more information, call University Activities at 229-4280.
