SUMMER WORKSHOPS AT UD
WILL FOCUS ON EDUCATION

DAYTON, Ohio, June 2, 1989—The University of Dayton will be offering a series of workshops during June and July, sponsored by the School of Education. The workshops will last from two to four days, with housing and meal service available.

Sessions will focus on educational concerns such as legal issues, educational leadership, teaching social skills to academic underachievers, an administrator's guide to nonverbal communication, acquiring a repertoire of teaching models and styles, computers in educational leadership, the administrator's role in promoting justice and peace, and multicultural education and global perspectives. A number of workshops are designed specifically for Catholic school teachers, such as sessions on Biblical relevance in life and ministry, essential elements to ensure the future for Catholic schools, and finance and the Catholic school.

Graduate level credit in education is offered for the workshops. Participants may also choose to audit the workshops or participate on a conference level.

The first workshop begins June 15. For a complete brochure on the UD summer workshops, write to the Rev. Joseph D. Massucci, University of Dayton, School of Education, 113 Chaminade Hall, Dayton, OH, 45469-0001 or call (513) 229-3146.
