DAYTON, Ohio, January 30, 1973 — The National Science Foundation recently awarded the University of Dayton with a 1972 Institutional Grant for Science, in the sum of $37,063.

Almost eight million dollars, ranging in amounts from $545 to $75,603, was awarded to 660 colleges and universities across the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. The annual grants are designed to help institutions maintain a strong academic base for science, mathematics, and engineering, through use of the funds for costs of science activities. The size of each institutional grant is based on the amount of Federal research awards received during fiscal year 1971.

U.D. received the third largest grant of the 30 colleges and universities in Ohio which received awards. To date, funds awarded to the University under the NSF grant total $217,533.
