NEWS RELEASE

APPLICATIONS NOW TAKEN FOR TWO-YEAR ROTC PLAN.

Applications are now being accepted for the two-year ROTC plan by the Military Science Department at the University of Dayton, according to Lieutenant Colonel Billy R. Smith, Professor of Military Science.

A sophomore student enrolled at Sinclair Community College, Wright State University, and the University of Dayton is now being offered the opportunity to be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army after only two years of on-campus ROTC training at the University of Dayton, or other colleges and universities offering Army ROTC Senior Division courses.

A basic six-week summer training period at Fort Knox Kentucky this summer following the sophomore year takes the place of the basic courses of students who didn't have the opportunity, or didn't elect to take the traditional four-year program, according to Smith.

The student must be classified as a junior and be physically fit, coupled with motivation and an earnest desire to serve his country as an officer to qualify, Smith said.

Detail information on the specific requirements, dates of the camp, and financial assistance may be obtained by visiting or writing the Professor of Military Science at the University of Dayton, Dayton, OH 45469.
