ARCHDIOCESE & UD SPONSOR
FIRST RELIGIOUS EDUCATION INSTITUTE

DAYTON, Ohio, January 28, 1976 --- As a cooperative effort between the University of Dayton and the Archdiocese of Cincinnati, the first annual Religious Education Institute will be held at UD Saturday, February 14 at 9 a.m.

The Office for Moral and Religious Education (MORES) at UD and the Archdiocese's Office of Religious Education planned the day-long seminar as a response to lay and religious educators.

The program consists of two formal presentations by Jegen revolving around her specialization, "Peace and Justice."

Attendees may then choose from three groups of speakers on various topics, including publishers explaining their religious education text series, faith development of different age groups, a film festival, and sessions relating more directly with Jegen's theme.

"The specific thing MORES is trying to do," explains Dr. Bruno Manno, S.M., Director, "is work closely with the archdiocese in helping them serve the needs they have in moral and religious education. It is a real attempt to provide ongoing religious education for people involved in religious education on all levels: pre-school to adult."

A liturgy at 5:30 will end the program. The enrollment fee for the day is $5, or $7 with lunch. Deadline for pre-registration is February 4. Those interested may contact Manno at 229-4329, or write the Office for Religious Education, 266 Bainbridge Street, Dayton, Ohio, 45402.
