UD WINS NATIONAL CATHOLIC PRESS AWARDS

DAYTON, Ohio -- The University of Dayton has won two 1991 Catholic Press Association (CPA) national journalism awards.

The Rev. James L. Heft, provost, and Una Cadegan, assistant professor of American studies, received first-place honors for their scholarly magazine article, "Mary of Nazareth, Feminism and the Tradition," that appeared in the June 1990 edition of Thought: A Review of Culture and Idea published by Fordham University.

Joseph Pici, professor of English and novelist, won a second-place award for his short story "Whispers," published in St. Anthony Messenger. Judges said Pici's story of a young man's visit to the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C., "very deftly. . .builds to the one very touching moment when he sees his father's name etched on the wall."

The Catholic Press Association includes more than 300 Catholic newspapers, magazines and publishers in the United States and Canada.
