COPYRIGHT PROTECTION SYMPOSIUM
SPONSORED BY UD LAW SCHOOL

DAYTON, Ohio -- Using copyright laws to prevent competitors from taking advantage of expensive research is the focus of a symposium to be held Nov. 8-9 at the Dayton Convention Center.

The "Copyright Protection for Computer Databases, CD-roms and Factual Compilations" symposium will run from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day and is sponsored by the law and technology program at the University of Dayton School of Law.

"The computer age has brought a phenomenal increase in the amount of information that can be accessed quickly," said symposium chair Robert A. Kreiss, director of the law and technology program and associate professor of law. "With this has also come the exceptional ease with which such information can be copied and transferred."

The symposium will consist of discussions based on scholarly articles presented by 16 experts, interspersed with open discussions by participants.

The symposium registration fee is $200. This includes continental breakfasts, luncheons and a loose-leaf copy of the scholarly articles discussed in the presentation. A separate copy of the articles for those unable to attend the symposium is available for $65.
