UD INSTITUTE FOR LEARNING IN RETIREMENT OFFERS SPRING SEMINARS

DAYTON, Ohio -- Retirees with an interest in learning without exams, grades or even required attendance are invited to take part in one or more of the 42 seminars that are being offered this spring by the University of Dayton Institute for Learning in Retirement.

Participants can choose to attend as many seminars as they can schedule between March 15 and May 15. Registration is open to people 55 years of age or older and their spouses.

This community outreach program brings retired people to campus to participate in seminars that are led by fellow retirees as well as community volunteers and UD professors. Since UD piloted the peer-run program in March 1994, participation has more than tripled.

Seminar topics include American music, basic drawing, birdwatching, comparative religions, dinosaurs, financial planning, computers, native plants, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Ohio's presidents, opera, play reading, wine tasting and many more.

The UD Institute for Learning in Retirement is sponsored by UD's office of continuing education.

If you are interested in receiving a spring program brochure, moderating a seminar or volunteering to assist with programs, please call Julie Mitchell of UD's continuing education office at (937) 229-2347.
