DEAN FOR GRADUATE STUDIES
AND RESEARCH

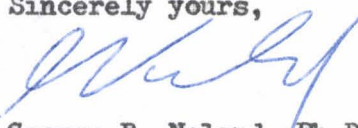

March 3, 1978

Bro. Paul Boeckerman, S.M.
Registrar
CAMPUS

Dear Brother Boeckerman:

As you have no doubt discovered by now, there have been extensive changes in the courses in the Department of English. These changes were under discussion by the Graduate Committee of Arts and Sciences during the fall. However, because of some problems they were not able to complete the discussion and approve the changes in time for the catalog to be printed. The first copy of the changes was brought to me on February 10, 1978. Because of the kind of changes, I asked Dr. Means to prepare a listing of the changes in terms of new courses, renumbered courses, and retitled courses as well as courses dropped. This is now complete and I am enclosing this for your information.

Sincerely yours,

George B. Noland, Ph.D.
Dean for Graduate Studies
and Research

ENGLISH (ENG)

Michael H. Means, Chairman of the Department

The program leading to the Master of Arts with a major in English offers the opportunity for an intensified study of English and American literature, language, and writing; it develops in the student a competence in independent research and in the exercise of sound literary judgment. It is particularly useful for teachers in secondary schools and community colleges.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

The student seeking admission must have completed studies in English and American literature which will enable the student to pursue graduate studies with distinction. The student will ordinarily have completed, with a grade point average of at least 3.00, 24 semester hours in literature, of which at least 18 are in upper-division courses.

PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

Normally 30 semester hours are required. Every applicant who, after twelve semester hours of graduate work, has attained a graduate point average of at least 2.75 will be given a Diagnostic examination; this examination will be reviewed with the candidate by the candidate's advisor and two other members of the graduate staff. They will also review, at this time, the candidate's academic background and comments by faculty members who have had the candidate in classes. On the basis of this material and the review, the Committee will make recommendations about the candidate's graduate program to the chairman; among these recommendations will be the total number of hours the candidate needs for completion of the degree. Exceptionally well qualified students may earn the master's degree in less than 30 semester hours; students with deficiencies may be required to take up to 36 semester hours of graduate study.

ENG. 601, Research and Bibliography, is required of each applicant for the degree. Eng. 588, Studies in Criticism, is required of each applicant who has not had a satisfactory undergraduate course in literary criticism. Students in the program must take at least 12 hours of 600-level courses (including Eng. 601).

Because the Master of Arts is not a specialist degree, candidates must take a balanced program of courses. Normally such a program will include a balance of early and later literature and English and American literature; or of literature, language, and writing; or of literature, writing, and teaching.

A thesis upon a topic approved by the graduate committee of the Department, for which six semester hours of credit are granted, can be accepted if the interview committee recommends this option.
