Research exercise: The "Genocide" of Timor-Leste: A Study of Human Suffering and International Ignorance

Molly Ledwith

University of Dayton, stander@udayton.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://ecommons.udayton.edu/stander_posters

Part of the Arts and Humanities Commons, Business Commons, Education Commons, Engineering Commons, Life Sciences Commons, Medicine and Health Sciences Commons, Physical Sciences and Mathematics Commons, and the Social and Behavioral Sciences Commons

Recommended Citation
http://ecommons.udayton.edu/stander_posters/524

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Stander Symposium at eCommons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Stander Symposium Posters by an authorized administrator of eCommons. For more information, please contact frice1@udayton.edu, mschlangen1@udayton.edu.
The “Genocide” of Timor-Leste: A Study of Human Suffering and International Ignorance
Molly Ledwith
Advisor: Dr. Anthony Talbott

Overview
The Indonesian occupation of Timor-Leste in 1975 resulted in the deaths of an estimated 200,000 Timorese, which accounted for more than a quarter of the territory’s total population. Unfortunately, this terrible injustice went almost completely unrecognized by the international community. But even more disturbingly, there is evidence to suggest that the United States was not only aware of these injustices, but perhaps encouraged the Indonesians’ violent invasion. A mass killing of this magnitude is normally dubbed “genocide.” However, the situation that occurred in Timor-Leste has never been labeled as an actual “genocide,” most likely due to the involvement of the United States and other Western countries trying to avoid blame.

US Involvement
More recently released documents have identified close relations between the Ford administration and President Suharto of Indonesia during the time of the occupation of Timor-Leste. It has since been discovered that the US supplied about 90% of the weapons used for the invasion. Not only was the US aware of the invasion, but the Ford administration supported and condoned Suharto and his troops as well.

Indonesian Occupation
Indonesia invaded Timor-Leste in December 1975, and by 1979 an estimated 120,000 Timorese were killed. 35,000 Indonesian “volunteer forces” maliciously attacked innocent civilians, tortured prisoners, forced women and children into sex slavery, and sprayed chemical napalm on villages. Because these mass killings accounted for the deaths of 1 in 6 Timorese, this invasion is among the worst atrocities in modern history.

International Ignorance
So why don’t more people know about this? Mostly because President Suharto closed Timor-Leste to outsiders during the 1980s, making it easy to control any information about the brutality of the Indonesian military from leaking out of Timor-Leste. During this time, the issue of Timor-Leste largely disappeared from mainstream news and from international consciousness.